Partner Presentation: AARP

Cheryl Reed Walker and Jean Mathisen highlighted three of AARP's Washington initiatives: Money $marts, Create the Good, and Fraud Fighters.

Money $marts is an education campaign that encourages people to "Spend Less, Save More, and Stay Sharp" during the current recession. Free public events will be held in Mountlake Terrace, Kennewick, Spokane Valley, and Lacey, where experts will speak on financial planning, how to avoid scams and schemes, and strategies to boost brain health and improve memory. To register for these free events, call 1-877-926-8300 or go online to www.aarp.org/wa.

Create the Good is a new web site designed by AARP to engage communities in volunteer projects. Volunteer opportunities are posted online at www.createthegood.org and can be easily found by entering a keyword and zip code. Do-it-Yourself Toolkits are also available through Create the Good that include tips on how to organize a community service project in a variety of areas.

Fraud Fighters provides one-on-one peer counseling to elders who are potential victims of scams, schemes, and fraud. Washington State is home to one in eight AARP fraud fighter programs in the country, the model for which came out of a study conducted by Stanford University. This study showed that when potential victims of fraud were paired with a volunteer providing one-on-one counseling and education on how to avoid scams they were less likely to become victims in the future.

Fraud Fighters works through older adult volunteers who make over 100,000 outbound calls per year to educate potential victims on how to avoid the latest marketplace schemes. They also link people to community resources to help reduce their risk of being victimized. Consumers can also call in to learn how to protect themselves from fraud at 1-800-646-2283. AARP has speakers available to conduct community presentations on how to avoid fraud. Contact Jean Mathisen at 206-517-9353 to discuss setting up a community presentation.

HAP's Aging at Home Initiative

HAP plans to host a one-day event that will bring community members together to learn about and act on Aging at Home projects in their communities. HAP is able to provide seed money for well-designed Aging at Home projects that come from the one-day event. Ideas on how to engage community members were shared and a subcommittee was formed to develop a structured approach for the event.

Sally Brown, HAP's new VISTA, will begin on April 19th to work on the Aging at Home Initiative. She will be hosted at Senior Services and will work with all HAP partners to promote Aging at Home.
